FINAL ORDER

The appellant has filed a petition for review in this case asking us to reconsider the initial decision issued by the administrative judge. We grant petitions such as this one only when significant new evidence is presented to us that was not available for consideration earlier or when the administrative judge made an error interpreting a law or regulation. The regulation that establishes this standard of review is found in Title 5 of the Code of Federal Regulations, section 1201.115 (5 C.F.R. § 1201.115).

In the initial decision, the administrative judge held that the Board lacks jurisdiction over the appeal because the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) rescinded its September 23, 2011 reconsideration decision, which informed the appellant that it overpaid her annuity benefits under the Federal Employees' Retirement System. The appellant filed a submission with the Washington Regional Office, which was docketed as a petition for review. In it, she complains, among other things, that OPM has started taking money out of her annuity. We agree with the administrative judge that OPM's decision to rescind its September 23, 2011 reconsideration letter divests the Board of jurisdiction, and he properly dismissed the appeal.² See, e.g., Moore v. Office of Personnel Management, 114 M.S.P.R. 549, ¶ 4 (2010) ("If OPM completely rescinds a reconsideration decision, its rescission divests the Board of jurisdiction over the appeal in which that reconsideration decision is at issue, and the appeal must be dismissed.") (citations omitted). Our disposition does not preclude the appellant from filing a new Board appeal if OPM issues a reconsideration decision that is adverse to her interests.

After fully considering the filings in this appeal, we conclude that there is no new, previously unavailable, evidence and that the administrative judge made no error in law or regulation that affects the outcome. 5 C.F.R. § 1201.115(d). Therefore, we DENY the petition for review and AFFIRM the initial decision issued by the administrative judge, which is now the Board's final decision. 5 C.F.R. § 1201.113(b).

² In light of our disposition, we need not address the untimeliness of the appellant's petition for review.
