MERIT SYSTEMS PROTECTION BOARD (MSPB) TO PRESENT SPECIAL STUDIES FINDINGS TO FEDERAL ASIAN PACIFIC AMERICAN COUNCIL (FAPAC)

On Wednesday, May 5, 2010, MSPB staff will present findings from its recent report “Fair and Equitable Treatment: Progress Made and Challenges Remaining” at the 25th National Leadership Training Conference of the Federal Asian Pacific American Council (FAPAC).

Chairman Susan Tsui Grundmann stated, “The MSPB is pleased to have the opportunity to present the results of its research to FAPAC and its members. We share FAPAC’s vision of a Federal Government that has a diverse, representative workforce, advances employees based on merit, and fully utilizes the skills and insights of all its employees.”

The report examines issues such as workforce diversity and explores Federal employees’ perceptions of their treatment in the workplace. The report discusses how Federal employees advance in their careers and explains those factors that employees believe may accelerate or inhibit their career advancement. James Tsugawa, Senior Research Analyst with the MSPB Office of Policy & Evaluation, will present the report’s findings at the FAPAC Conference. This report, and other special studies of the Federal workforce, is available on the MSPB website at www.mspb.gov/studies.

The U.S. Merit System Protection Board (MSPB) is an independent, quasi-judicial agency that protects Federal merit systems and the rights of individuals within those systems. The MSPB also conducts studies of the civil service and other merit systems in the Executive Branch.
