FINAL ORDER

The appellant has filed a petition for review of the initial decision, which dismissed her appeal of a reconsideration decision of the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) for lack of jurisdiction. The underlying reconsideration decision concerned an alleged overpayment of retirement annuity benefits under the Federal Employees' Retirement System (FERS). Generally, we grant <sup>1</sup> A nonprecedential order is one that the Board has determined does not add significantly to the body of MSPB case law. Parties may cite nonprecedential orders, but such orders have no precedential value; the Board and administrative judges are not required to follow or distinguish them in any future decisions. In contrast, a precedential decision issued as an Opinion and Order has been identified by the Board as significantly contributing to the Board's case law. See 5 C.F.R. § 1201.117(c).

petitions such as this one only in the following circumstances: the initial decision contains erroneous findings of material fact; the initial decision is based on an erroneous interpretation of statute or regulation or the erroneous application of the law to the facts of the case; the administrative judge's rulings during either the course of the appeal or the initial decision were not consistent with required procedures or involved an abuse of discretion, and the resulting error affected the outcome of the case; or new and material evidence or legal argument is available that, despite the petitioner's due diligence, was not available when the record closed. Title 5 of the Code of Federal Regulations, section 1201.115 (5 C.F.R. § 1201.115). After fully considering the filings in this appeal, we conclude that the petitioner has not established any basis under section 1201.115 for granting the petition for review. Therefore, we DENY the petition for review and AFFIRM the initial decision, which is now the Board's final decision. 5 C.F.R. § 1201.113(b).

An appellant bears the burden of establishing Board jurisdiction over an appeal contesting an OPM reconsideration decision by preponderant evidence. Miller v. Office of Personnel Management, 123 M.S.P.R. 68, ¶ 7 (2015). If OPM completely rescinds a reconsideration decision, the rescission divests the Board of jurisdiction over the appeal in which the reconsideration decision is at issue, and the appeal must be dismissed. Glasgow v. Office of Personnel Management, 103 M.S.P.R. 531, ¶ 5 (2006).

During the proceedings below, OPM's assertions about the status of its reconsideration decision were somewhat ambiguous. It indicated both that it planned to rescind its overpayment reconsideration decision and that it had already done so. Initial Appeal File (IAF), Tab 1 at 4-5. According to OPM, the rescission was necessary because the reconsideration decision had overstated the amount owed by the appellant. Id. After this representation by OPM, the administrative judge dismissed the appeal for lack of jurisdiction. IAF, Tab 7, Initial Decision.

The appellant filed her petition for review, without including any argument. Petition for Review (PFR) File, Tab 1. She did not, for example, specify that she disagreed with the administrative judge's determination that OPM withdrew its reconsideration decision, depriving the Board of jurisdiction. Noting this ongoing ambiguity about the existence of any operable reconsideration decision within the Board's jurisdiction, the Clerk of the Board issued an order, seeking clarification from both parties. PFR File, Tab 7. OPM responded, but not until months after the deadline for doing so and in a way that does not clear up the underlying ambiguity surrounding its reconsideration decision. PFR File, Tab 8. Meanwhile, the appellant did not submit any response.

Under the circumstances before us, we cannot conclude that the appellant has shown that the administrative judge erred by dismissing this appeal. In other words, she has not asserted, much less proven, that there remains an operable reconsideration decision over which the Board has jurisdiction. However, if the appellant receives a new reconsideration decision affecting her rights or interests under FERS, the appellant may file another appeal with the appropriate regional office consistent with the Board's regulations. 5 U.S.C. § 8461(e)(1); 5 C.F.R. § 841.308.

(2) Judicial or EEOC review of cases involving a claim of discrimination. This option applies to you only if you have claimed that you were affected by an action that is appealable to the Board and that such action was based, in whole or in part, on unlawful discrimination. If so, you may obtain judicial review of this decision—including a disposition of your discrimination claims—by filing a civil action with an appropriate U.S. district court (not the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit), within 30 calendar days after you receive this decision. 5 U.S.C. § 7703(b)(2); see Perry v. Merit Systems Protection Board, 582 U.S. 420 (2017). If you have a representative in this case, and your representative receives this decision before you do, then you must file with the district court no later than 30 calendar days after your representative receives this decision. If the action involves a claim of discrimination based on race, color, religion, sex, national origin, or a disabling condition, you may be entitled to representation by a court-appointed lawyer and to waiver of any requirement of prepayment of fees, costs, or other security. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(f) and 29 U.S.C. § 794a.

If so, and your judicial petition for review “raises no challenge to the Board’s disposition of allegations of a prohibited personnel practice described in section 2302(b) other than practices described in section 2302(b)(8), or 2302(b)(9)(A)(i), (B), (C), or (D),” then you may file a petition for judicial review either with the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit or any court of appeals of competent jurisdiction.<sup>3</sup> The court of appeals must receive your
